

Press release, 13.02.2025

New Head of Residential Heat Pumps Division

On 1 March 2025, Peter Waldburger will become the new Head of Residential Heat Pumps Division and a member of the executive management at CTA AG. With his many years' experience and his sound market knowledge, he will help promote CTA as the leading Swiss heat pump manufacturer over the long term.

Peter Waldburger will take over the Residential Heat Pumps Division on 1 March 2025 from Roland Obrecht, who has left CTA after 17 years and is focusing on new challenges. We would like to extend our heartfelt thanks to Roland Obrecht at this point for his dedication and the valuable contributions he has made to CTA.

Peter Waldburger has extensive industry expertise in multiple different roles: his previous position was as the Head of Product Management/Marketing and a member of the executive management at Viessmann (Schweiz) GmbH, and before that he was responsible for business development at Stiebel Eltron. He trained as a sanitary fitter and an electrician and has extensive knowledge of product management, marketing, finance, logistics and business development. The 57-year-old has solid experience in management and shows a flair for products and digitisation.

In his new role as Head of Residential Heat Pumps Division for single-family homes and apartment buildings and a member of the executive management, Peter Waldburger will devote himself to further consolidating CTA's position as the leading developer and manufacturer of Swiss heat pumps.

About CTA

With its heat pumps, air-conditioning units and chillers, CTA makes sure everything is always at the right temperature. The family-run Swiss company has been committed to renewable energies and energy-efficient system solutions for heating and cooling buildings since 1981.
